Tightened Travel Policies Could Force Military Families To Remain At Home

TOUGH, new dependent travel policies may lie ahead for the Armed Forces. This prospect confronts thousands of Service families throughout the world as the result of a Senate Armed Services Committee recommendation (THE JOURNAL, 2 August) that present dependent travel rules should be "seriously questioned" by Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy.

The Committee thinks too many dependents are stationed in "areas of potential combat" and that they might slow up the ability of U. S. troops to react to an immediate war threat.

The Pentagon advised THE JOURNAL 5 August it has not yet had time to study

Army Hospitals, Navy Housing Restored, AF Construction Upheld In Hill Action

House and Senate conferees have restored authority for the construction of new Army hospitals at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., and Ft. McClellan, Ala. Funds for the $1.9 million hospital at

Carlisle and the $3.3 million hospital at McClellan had been turned down, however, in earlier House action, and the money question is now pending before

Budget Action Protects MediCare

The House and Senate, reaching agreement on a $39.6 billion fiscal '59 military budget, have approved more than $70 million for the Family Medical Care program.

This action, which removes the threat to the effectiveness of the program, came as a Defense Department Committee recommended that a parallel program be inaugurated for family dental care. This will require legislation.

The House originally had slashed the Defense Department request for financing the MediCare program to $60 million, insisting that families must be forced to

ADVISORY TO TOURISTS: LOGISTICS CARE NEEDED

The U. S. Air Force Academy, near Pike's Peak, is going to be the target of a huge tourist invasion. Visitors would be well advised to come prepared.

First of all, no money has been provided as yet for construction of adequate parking facilities and for picnic grounds which Academy officials seek.

Secondly, there's a critical shortage of comfort facilities.

The paucity of tourist accommodations is not the only immediate shortcoming at the Academy.

The Colorado Springs installation also lacks an NCO Club.

Maj. Gen. James E. Briggs, the Superintendent, has asked approval of funds for an NCO facility on more than one occasion, and on more than one occasion he has been turned down.

Concrete And Cost Charges Command Headline Attention, But Cadets Remain The Priceless Factor At USAF Academy

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.

THE quality and look-ahead spirit of the burgeoning Cadet Wing—not the current controversy over alleged construction excesses—indisputably is what counts the most in the story of the U. S. Air Force Academy.

However obscured by the notoriety given to cubic foot costs and the price of medicine cabinets, the root fact is that 45% of the Air Force cadets are taking more courses than their tough curriculum requires.

"And they are doing this on an absolutely voluntary basis," Maj. Gen. James E. Briggs, USAF, Academy Superintendent, emphasized to a JOURNAL reporter here.

Superintendent Briggs said that 15% of the cadets are carrying extra classroom workloads that will permit them to receive enough credits to earn a college major in addition to the B.S. degree awarded all Academy graduates.

To earn a major, a cadet must take a minimum of 17 and a maximum of 30 hours above the 140 semester hours of regular classroom work and 26 hours of military airmanship.

Col. Robert F. McDermott, USAF, the 38-year-old Dean of Faculty, who apparently is destined soon to become one of the youngest general officers in the Armed Forces—he replaced Brig. Gen. Don Z. Zimmerman, USAF—says, in answer to a newsman's question, that as far as he knows cadets and midshipmen at the other Service

FOOTBALL SCHEDULE: AN ACADEMIC QUESTION

Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy ultimately may be forced to call the signals on future plans for Service Academy football games.

In gridiron parlance, officials at the Army, Navy and Air Force Academies are still "knocking heads" in working out long-range schedules.

The problem results from the forthcoming entrance of the U. S. Air Force Academy into major football competition.

The "Falcons" are scheduled to play Army at Michie Stadium, West Point, the last Saturday in October of 1959. A game between the Air Force and Navy is set for Annapolis in 1960.

As to whether the Army and Air Force will meet in 1960, Pentagon officials said this week that no final decision has been made.

It is learned authoritatively that the Air Force wants the Army to come west for a game in 1960, but there is some reluctance to this at West Point—presumably because of the high altitude at Denver.

Chances are that the schedule difficulties will be worked out among the three Academy Superintendents, but if disagreements persist, and political pressures develop from cities, such as Denver and Chicago, which want an inter-Service tilt, Secretary McElroy may be called upon to make a command decision.

USAF PROFS. — Maj. Gen. James E. Briggs, Superintendent of the U. S. Air Force Academy, swears in two recently appointed permanent professors, Col. William T. Woodyard, Professor of Chemistry (center), and Col. Peter R. Moody, Professor of English. Both previously taught at West Point. They are the second and third of 21 permanent professors authorized at the Air Force Academy. The first permanent professor, Col. Robert F. McDermott, appointed last year, is serving as Dean of Faculty.

The Business of Versatile Helicopters . . .

One of the primary objectives of the Army's growing aviation program is to execute its many aerial missions with the fewest possible aircraft types. The necessity of this consolidation in terms of logistics and over-all economy is underlined by the continual increase in the number of missions to be tackled on the nuclear battlefield.

The Army's H-23D "Raven" meets that multi-mission requirement in the light helicopter category. Its versatility is attained by a performance, a load and space capacity, and a ruggedness to perform its tasks without compromises or limitations.

Hiller has now applied a new 305 hp engine to the basic H-23D ship. The resulting 12E aircraft—the most powerful in the two to four place class—is prepared to capture a whole new order of missions, many of them not previously considered within the realm of light helicopters.

VADM. SMITH SCORES EXTRA PAY

VADM. Harold P. Smith, USN, Chief of Naval Personnel, has given public expression to a widely held belief in the Armed Forces that "responsibility pay" for officers should not be implemented.

The Military Pay Act of 1958 authorizes extra pay of $50 to $150 per month for officers in O-3, O-4, O-5 and O-6 ranks who hold positions of "extraordinary responsibility and critical necessity."

Speaking to newsmen at the Pentagon (see Page 6), Admiral Smith termed the extra pay authority an "alien concept," said it would be difficult to administer and would create "a distinction between officers."

Admiral Smith took the position that highly motivated officers do not need an extra hundred dollars to strive toward assignment to important jobs in the Navy.

The Chief of Personnel said the Navy does not need "add on's" to the Pay Act, which he described as "eminently fair." Admiral Smith said he does not believe the Navy will be called upon to implement the responsibility pay provisions, cost of which could reach $12 million.

Responsibility pay was opposed by the Pentagon. It was made a part of the Pay Act as a result of Senate action led by Senator John Stennis (D-Miss).

Hull, USN-Ret. Next week's JOURNAL will tell the story of this organization, whose current plans could bring major revisions in Armed Forces communications and electronics programs.

Two USCG Captains Will Get Flag Rank

President Eisenhower has nominated Coast Guard Captains Carl B. Olsen, 54, and Peter V. Colmar, 50, for rear admiral rank.

Both nominees attended the U. S. Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn., with Captain Olsen graduating in 1928 and Captain Colmar winning his commission in 1929.

Captain Olsen is serving as Deputy Western Area Commander, with Headquarters in San Francisco. Captain Colmar is Chief of Staff of the 13th Coast Guard District, Seattle.

Headquarters has not yet named new assignments for the flag-nominees.

Captain Colmar holds a Bachelor of Science Degree and a Master of Science degree in Electrical Engineering from MIT, and has served as Chief of the Electronics Engineering Division at Headquarters.

He is married to the former Marjorie Howard Alton of Manchester, Conn. They have two children.

Captain Olsen, a flier, earned a Master's Degree in Aeronautical Engineering from the California Institute of Technology. Among his previous assignments were: Assistant Chief, Search and Rescue Division at Headquarters and Commandant of Cadets at the Academy.

Comptroller Upholds Pay Discrimination

The Comptroller General has denied Hazardous Duty pay to military personnel injured in any one of seven hazardous duty assignments when they are permanently assigned to a medical facility for treatment of their injuries.

Persons injured in the six remaining types of hazardous duty, under Comptroller Decision B-136262, may under the same circumstances continue to receive extra pay for up to three months after the accident.

Denied hazardous duty pay upon receipt of permanent change of station orders for medical treatment are personnel assigned to: an active status submarine, a leprosarium, explosives demolition duty, submarine escape training duty, duty at the Navy Deep Sea Diving School or the Navy Experimental Diving Unit, duty as "low pressure chamber inside observer," and helium-oxygen diving duty.

Personnel performing the following hazardous duties may retain their pay entitlement for three months when given permanent change of station orders for medical treatment: qualified glider personnel; paratroopers; parachute riggers; human acceleration or deceleration experimental subjects; human test subjects in thermal test experiments; and flight-status personnel.

The Pentagon Military Pay and Allowance Committee had previously told the Comptroller that under existing decisions "an inequity would arise between a member receiving medical treatment at his permanent duty station and the member that must be transferred for medical treatment." The former would continue to receive hazardous duty pay, while the latter would be deprived of it.

The Comptroller agreed that this would be the case in the seven enumerated cases. It would not hold true, he said, for the remaining six.

Col. Marion H. Mills, DC, USA-Ret., recently Central Dental Laboratory Commander at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, Washington, D. C., will enter private practice in prosthetic dentistry in Battle Creek, Mich. His residence in that city is 64 Latta Street.

Army Gets First 35 Prop-jet Aircraft

The Army has received Defense Department go-ahead to purchase 35 YAO-1-Mohawk propjet aircraft from the Grumman Aircraft Engineering Corporation, Bethpage, N. Y.

The Mohawk, with an empty weight of 7700 pounds, will be one of the largest fixed-wing airplanes to enter Army service, and the first to utilize prop-jet power.

Designed to operate from small unimproved fields, the two-engine craft will be used mainly for tactical observation. Its 55-knot stall speed and relatively short take-off and landing capabilities will enable the Mohawk to virtually live with the Army in the field.

Nine prototypes of the airplane are now in production under a recent $22 million contract. All nine will be tested by the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics. The Navy administers the Mohawk contract for the Army.

COMMANDS BERLIN UNIT. Col. Fredrick C. Wyand (left), accepts the green badges of leadership as the new commanding officer of the 3d Battle Group, 6th Infantry, from the departing commanding officer, Lt. Col. Walter W. Davis. G-E Builds Instrument System For Army Reactors

A completely transistorized instrument system is being developed by General Electric for a nuclear power reactor for the Army's cold-weather training station at Ft. Greely, Alaska.

According to Mr. E. B. Hubbard, Sales Engineer at General Electric's Instrument Department in West Lynn, Mass., the system, valued at over $100,000, will be capable of measuring accurately all neutron levels within the reactor. Engineers began work on the system in June and expect to complete it in about a year.

The entire primary nuclear system for the station will be supplied by ALCO Products, Inc. of Schenectady, N. Y. Prime contractor for the Fort Greely project is Peter Kiewit Sons Company of Omaha, Neb.

The station will be the first nuclear power facility in Alaska.

The reactor power plant, designated APPR-1A, is expected to be in operation by early 1960. It will be the Army's second power reactor installation. The first, designed and built by ALCO Products, is also a pressurized-water type reactor plant. It was built at Fort Belvoir, Va., and has been in operation since April 1957.

MAGNIFIED STARLIGHT gathered by the Army's new "Cascaded Photosensitive Image Intensifier," above, will soon provide night vision for combat troops. Developed by the Engineer Research and Development Laboratories, Ft. Belvoir, Va., it intensifies reflected starlight or diffused light from skyglow, enabling troops to see objects otherwise obscured by darkness.

Can anyone build a missile?

Theoretically, yes! Today, even the sandlot Leonardos and knee-pants astronauts are building them.

The problem in this business is to stay ahead of the game, working today on the programs that mark the way into the future. The end result—five to ten years later—must be far more than a missile. It must be a complete operational system, integrally engineered from concept to completion of the mission; produced in facilities totally integrated for designing, building and testing by engineers and scientists who know and understand the problems and requirements of the military. The payoff is in full payload performance in the field—time after time—with military personnel setting it up, proving it out, and operating the controls.

For the creation of today's most advanced missiles and the big space vehicles that are now in the planning stage, Martin capabilities are among the finest in the world. They are the result of a planned program of manpower and facilities development which commenced nearly fifteen years ago with the opening guns of the U.S. Missile Age.

Navy Scuttles Retention Plan After Capitol Objections; Promotion Peril Told

THE Navy, thwarted in its announced plans to 'select out' a number of captains and commanders with less than 30 years service, has declared anew that it must have legislation to avoid a drastic cut in promotions, including the alarming possibility that the passover rate to lieutenant commander and commander could rise to 88% by 1962.

This bleak picture was painted by VAdm. Harold P. Smith, Chief of Naval Personnel, during a news conference 30 July at which he announced that the Navy has abandoned its retention plan which was to have resulted in solicitation of voluntary retirement requests from among a group of about 170 captains in year groups 1930, 1931 and 1932.

Admiral Smith expressed concern over the fact that younger officers are submitting resignations because the path of advancement is being blocked. He noted that without legislation the promotion opportunity for commanders and lieutenant commanders could drop as low as 12% by 1962.

The decision to drop the widely announced retention plan was made 30 July following a meeting of Admiral Smith and House Armed Services Subcommittee members.

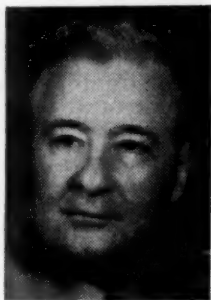

The Navy had planned to take administrative action to ease the critical hump situation, but was advised by Representative Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex.), Subcommittee Chairman, that the problem "could best be handled by law."

As a result of the Congressional advice, the Navy will not follow the procedure it started in the case of four-stripe officers. This year, the Line flag selection board had the dual function of choosing captains for rear admiral and of compiling a list of captains who were to be asked to step aside to make room for juniors.

Another board which met 29 July to name commanders for four-striper rank will confine itself to making selections, instead of also preparing a "select out" list, as was previously indicated.

The Navy, the Personnel Chief told newsmen, "is overdue in its recognition of the hump problem." Officers who will be affected by the proposed hump legislation are pre-WWII Academy graduates, early Naval Aviation Cadets and NROTC students who came on active duty in the 1930's.

These officers, Admiral Smith noted, went up the promotion ladder without bearing the burden of an appreciable attrition rate. Now they must be asked to face attrition late in their careers, he said.

The key point, the Admiral explained, is that unless hump legislation is enacted, stagnation will continue to build up.

Without legislative aid, officers in the four year groups 1942 through 1945 soon will be passed over at the rate of 75%. Between now and 1967 the Navy will have approximately 2,000 billets for four-stripe officers. There are, however, 8,000 officers in the hump years. In other words, without help from Congress, officers in year groups 1942-45 will have only one chance in four of being selected for a fourth stripe.

Until the hump problem is solved, Admiral Smith said, there can only be a 50-50 chance for officers being considered for captain's rank. Boards considering lieutenant commanders for three-stripe rank will only be able to name 55% for advancement while passing over 45% of the eligibles.

The Personnel Chief said that with legislation the problem will end by 1967 when the last of the hump from commander to captain will occur.

Admiral Smith said he will not ask

Congress for a constructive credit section in the legislation which will be taken up at the next session. In the "Hump" Bill introduced in January 1957 (HR-8068) section 12 asked for a special method of computing retired pay of commanders and captains involuntarily retired from the Service. The proposal asked authorization crediting half the number of years an officer is retired early as a multiplier in the computation of retired pay.

Although he personally does not favor constructive credit, the Admiral said he "would leave this matter to the feelings of Congress."

In addition, the Admiral said he favors a selection system for two-star officers moving up from lower-half rear admiral to upper half rear admiral.

B/G Masters Directs Lt. Colonel Board

A Marine Corps selection board, headed by Brig. Gen. James M. Masters, sr., Assistant Chief of Staff, G-2 is in session to pick majors for advancement to lieutenant colonel.

Headquarters estimates that the in-zone selection rate will be approximately 70%.

The zone extends from Maj. Wallace M. Halbert, Lineal No. 261, through Maj. James V. Peebles, Lineal No. 439, in the 1 Jan. 1958 Combined Lineal List.

There are 179 officers in the promotion zone. Last year's board chose 116 from a 171-officer zone, passing over 76 majors for the first time.

Other members of the board which convened 29 July are: Brigadier Generals Samuel R. Shaw and Frank C. Tharlin; and Colonels Odell M. Conoley, Philip W. John, Glenn D. Morgan, John L. Smith, Grant Crane, (R) Loren E. Haffner, Albert J. Roose, Edwin C. Godbold and George E. Dooley.

Lt. Col. John N. Swartley is Recorder and Maj. Albert J. Belbusti is Assistant Recorder.

VAdm. McMahon Heads Board To Choose Captains

VAdm. Frederick W. McMahon, Commander, Eastern Sea Frontier, is President of the board convened to choose Line commanders for four-stripe rank.

Being considered are officers with dates of rank of 1 July 1954, and earlier. The 949-man zone extends from Cdr. Robert W. Robbins, Lineal No. 06958-00, through Alexander H. Clark, jr., Lineal No. 08337-00, in the 1 January 1958 Register.

The passover rate can be expected to rise, following the pattern which has established itself over the past eight years. At the same time, it is likely that the number of officers picked for four stripes will hit a new low.

Last year 216 three-strippers were named for promotion, the smallest number named in a four-year period.

The Fiscal Year 1958 selection board passed over 136 officers for the first time. Other members of the board are Rear Admirals J. M. Carson, R. E. Cronin, C. E. Ekstrom, W. E. Ferrall, I. E. Hobbs, M. J. Lawrence, E. T. Layton, W. H. Leahy, R. Mason, (R), E. J. Moran, J. N. Murphy, J. Quinn, R. M. Reynolds and W. A. Sutherland, jr.

Capt. H. T. Haselton is Recorder, with LCdr. A. A. Burki and WO J. C. Lordan serving as Assistant Recorders.

Capt. Carlson New CofS At Newport Naval Base

Capt. Daniel Carlson, USN, reporting from Paris, France, where he was Deputy Director of the Morale, Welfare and Personnel Division on the Staff of Commander, U. S. European Command, has assumed duties as Acting Chief of Staff of the Naval Base, Newport, R. I.

He succeeded RADM. James B. Weiler, USN-Ret. Admiral Weiler held the post for three years and in that capacity served as direct representative to three Naval Base Commanders—RADM. Joseph H. Wellings, RADM. Ralph Earle, jr., USN-Ret., and the present Base Commander, RADM. Henry Crommelin.

Captain Carlson, a former enlisted man, is a 1929 graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy. He resides with his wife, the former Natalie M. Savage of Winchester, Va., at 49 Berkeley Ave., Newport, R. I.

What You Should Know About This Symbol...

It may be new to you now, but you'll see it again and again. It's a symbol of service to government, the armed forces, to defense industry.

For it represents The Singer Manufacturing Company's Military Products Division, a functional team of three well known organizations—Haller, Raymond & Brown, Inc., Diehl Manufacturing Company, and Singer-Bridgeport.

The Military Products Division provides scientists and engineers familiar with government requirements . . . development and production facilities for making systems, products, and components in large quantities, at a practical cost.

It can handle projects from concepts to production, or serve defense industry capably as a subcontractor—in any of three ways—by developing to requirements, building to specifications, or by supplying a product line. Remember this symbol. It can serve you well. The Singer Manufacturing Company, Military Products Division, 149 Broadway, New York 6, N. Y.

Cadets, Not Concrete Costs, Are The Critical Factor At New Academy

From first page—

Academies are not carrying the extra study load necessary to win major credits in such subjects as Electrical and Aeronautical Engineering, Western Culture, Public Affairs, Physics and Chemistry.

The twin emphasis on science and humanities is a keystone in the Academy curriculum, with the 140 required hours divided evenly between the two disciplines.

A semester hour represents 150 minutes of cadet effort per week in class and preparation.

At the Academy, cadets say that the full 150 minutes—and more—will be required to keep pace with the new course in Astronautics that begins next month.

A measure of the caliber of the Academy's faculty is evident in the designation of Col. Benjamin P. Blasingame, USAF, to head the Department of Astronautics.

A Doctor of Science in Aeronautical Engineering from the Massachusetts In-Academy is Brig. Gen. Henry R. Sullivan, Jr., USAF, who reported 1 August to replace Brig. Gen. Robert M. Stillman, USAF. General Sullivan had been Commander of SAC's 72d Bombardment Wing in Puerto Rico.

The 1 August date marked another event at the Academy—the second anni-

CITY MANAGER

Superintendent Briggs, the "Mayor," refers to Col. Jasper A. Westbrook, USAF, Base Commander, as his "City Manager."

Ultimately, the Academy will comprise a city of about 12,000 military personnel and their families.

Lt. Col. Thomas L. Nash, USAF, is the Base Executive Officer.

versary of General Briggs' service as Superintendent. He succeeded the late Lt. Gen. Hubert R. Harmon, USAF, President Eisenhower's '15 classmate at West Point and the AF Academy's first Superintendent.

During the last weekend of this month, the 1160 members of the Cadet Wing, which will grow in a few years to twice that strength, will move from the interim Academy site at Lowry AFB to the spectacular permanent home at the base of the Rampart Range of the Rocky Mountains.

Col. A. E. Stoltz, USAF, Director of the Air Force Academy Construction Agency, told reporters here last week: "We shall be ready for them."

The move from Lowry will start 29 August. Classes will begin 2 September, the day after Labor Day.

Colonel Stoltz's Construction Agency has been at work since 4 June 1954, supervising work on a 17,800 acre area.

Late last week, Colonel Stoltz was able to report that $94.5 million worth of the $114 million authorized by Congress for Academy construction had been completed.

A total of $133.5 million has been approved to date for Academy construction.

Responding to stinging criticism from the House Appropriations Committee (THE JOURNAL 2 August), Colonel Stoltz stated:

"The construction itself is being done within the $114 million authorization... During the past year, construction work has progressed at the amazing rate of nearly $5.7 million worth a month, on the average... The construction race is in its final lap, and we are on the way to setting what may well be a peacetime record for a project of this magnitude and complexity."

General Briggs and Colonel Stoltz explain that the $133.5 million authorization is short by some millions of dollars the money that will be necessary to complete the Academy construction.

Secretary of the Air Force James H. Douglas has advised Congress that total construction costs can be expected to reach $160 million, provided that Congress gives the go-ahead in the next years for additional projects.

No new project likely will command a higher priority than construction of an operating air base, estimated to cost about $15,000,000.

When the Cadet Wing shifts from Lowry to Colorado Springs, General Briggs will become one of the biggest bus line operators in the Rockies. During

SON OF THE SERVICE

Among 10 cadets who were selected to escort visiting newsmen during the Academy press tour was Harry H. Culler, Jr., son of Col. Harry H. Culler, USAF, Commander of Brooks AFB, Tex.

Superintendent Briggs expressed a hope to reporters that legislation would be enacted to authorize increased appointments among Sons of the Service. President Eisenhower has sought such a measure.

NO TRAP HERE

Any would-be critics of the 18-hole golf course at the Air Force Academy won't be able to level charges that its construction represented a pet project of Superintendent Briggs.

Here's why: he doesn't play golf. Funds for the golf course have been provided by the Air Force Academy Foundation.

Chances are that the Foundation, a non-profit organization organized by private citizens, will undertake later the task of providing funds, probably about $2.5 million, for construction of a stadium.

their four years at the Academy, cadets receive 170 flying hours to qualify them as navigators; pilot training comes after graduation.

At Lowry, it is possible to get in a 5 hour flying mission within an allotment of 6½ hours.

With the move to Colorado Springs, some 70 miles away, General Briggs and his staff must check off 11 hours of cadet time for each flying mission.

"The availability of an airfield as part of the Academy complex," says Superintendent Briggs, "would mean great savings in our most precious commodity, the time of our cadets."

THREE ACADEMIES

General Briggs is a USMA '28 graduate, whose son, 1st Lt. James E. Briggs, Jr., USAF, USMA '54, married the former Ellen Anderson, daughter of Lt. Gen. Samuel E. Anderson, USAF, head of the Air Research and Development Command a '28 classmate of the Superintendent.

RAAdm. M. F. Schoeffel, USN-Ret., is married to General Briggs' sister, Marcia. Admiral Schoeffel was No. 1 in the USNA Class of '18.

The general's nephew, Lt(jg) Peter Schoeffel, USN, was graduated from Annapolis in 1954, the same year that the general's son was graduated from West Point.

Lieutenant Briggs, a KC-97 navigator at March AFB, Calif., and Mrs. Briggs are the parents of a child who, alas, won't be able to attend a Service Academy. She is two year old Elizabeth Adams Briggs.

stitute of Technology, Colonel Blasingame, who was 40 on 1 August, has joined the Academy faculty following a critical assignment as Air Force Ballistic Missile Division director for the high priority Martin Titan ICBM project.

General Briggs reports that 24% of his faculty—all of them Air Force officers—hold doctorate degrees. "We are hoping soon to raise that to a 30% level," the general adds quickly.

1,000 HERCULES HOURS

A senior pilot and World War II combat airlift veteran—Capt. Alonzo H. Huff, 463d Troop Carrier Wing—is the first airman in the U. S. Air Force to complete 1,000 hours of prop-jet flying time in the Lockheed Hercules C-130 combat transport.

Honoring him in ceremonies at Ardmore AFB, Okla., were representatives of the Air Force, Lockheed Aircraft who designed and manufactures the now-famed Hercules at Marietta, Ga., and Ardmore Chamber of Commerce.

Hoyt Prindle, Lockheed military relations representative, and Ray LaMons, resident representative of Lockheed, presented Capt. Huff with an engraved gold plaque commemorating his contributions to the development of Tactical Air Command's new "strong man of the airlift," the Hercules.

Col. George G. Norman, 463d commander, conducted the ceremonies. Ranking officers attending included: Col. Luther O'Hern, deputy wing commander; Lt. Col. John E. McClure, 773d Squadron commander; Maj. Jack Williams, squadron operations officer; and Maj. William Moeller.

Maj. Gen. Bunker Retires As Deputy Air Force IG

Maj. Gen. Howard G. Bunker, USAF, USMA '28, Air Force Deputy Inspector General, has retired at Norton AFB, Calif., after more than 30 years active duty.

Attending the retirement ceremonies

31 July at which General Bunker received the Legion of Merit were: Lt. Gen. Elmer J. Rogers, Air Force Inspector General; Maj. Gen. Jack J. Wood, who will take over General Bunker's post; Maj. Gen. Joseph D. Caldar, Director of Flight Safety Research; Brig. Gen. William G. Hipps, incoming Director of Readiness and Materiel Inspection; and Brig. Gen. Edward B. Gallant, Director of Procurement Inspection.

Before joining the Inspector General Office, General Bunker had served various assignments concerned with military uses of atomic energy. He served in the European theater during WW II.

Baby Recorder Cuts Flight Test Time

A miniature electronic tape recorder has cut testing flights and simplified test reporting work at Hill AFB, Utah.

Now in use by pilots testing F-89's, F-101's and F-102's repaired at Hill, the midget recorders pick up the pilot's report of the aircraft behavior as it is sent through flight testing. When testing is complete, a written transcription of the tape is made by stenographers.

Prior to use of the new device, which weighs less than three pounds, each pilot had to mark five printed sheets with more than 100 items in flight to record how the aircraft was acting.

Since installation of the new recorders, Maj. William C. Duncan, Chief of the Ogden Air Materiel Area's Flight Test Division, reports a "substantially reduced" number of test flights needed. He said that the more comprehensive write-ups enable flight test personnel to spot most troubles on the first hop.

Col. Borden Lackland Exec.

New Executive Officer of Lackland AFB, Tex., is Col. David B. Borden, former Base Director of Wing Personnel.

Tough Family Travel Policy Would Be Harmful

Barring family travel to overseas stations, as pointedly suggested by the Senate Armed Services Committee (story on first page), would be a serious blow to Service morale and a set-back to the long campaign to promote career incentives.

The Senate Committee questions the wisdom of permitting families of Service personnel to accompany them to "areas of potential combat." Under today's conditions virtually any station on the soil of our allies could be considered an area of potential combat.

Yet if commissioned and non-commissioned officers were faced with the prospect of serving 40 per cent of their time in overseas areas without their families it would be exceedingly difficult to retain any great numbers of them as professional career men. The loss of normal family life together with the added cost of maintaining a separate home in the states could be expected to off-set the attractiveness of the increased incomes provided under the new Pay Act. Thus there would result both an increase in costs and a loss in military efficiency.

The committee also criticizes the construction of family housing overseas and urges the Secretary of Defense to keep it at a minimum. Here, again, the committee is playing dangerously close to policies that would damage morale.

All these are factors which the military services are best able to judge and balance. They should not be put in the position of having to rule that any area is or is not an "area of potential combat." Rather they should be permitted to determine whether conditions warrant the presence of families or if they are such that the uniformed personnel should be burdened with the extra expense and lowered morale of long separations from their families. Any hard and fast set of arbitrary rules on family travel that might be imposed by Congress would be unwarranted and would hamper the Services in maintaining the strength and efficiency of their forces.

Let's Have The World's Best Air Force Academy

It's axiomatic that no matter how unjustified the charges, the true story takes a long, long time to catch up with the more sensational attacks made in the public press. Unfortunately, this probably will be the case in regard to the exaggerated charges concerning the construction costs of the U. S. Air Force Academy as made in the report of the Surveys Investigation Staff of the House Appropriations Committee and released for public consumption by the latter group.

The report and the newspaper stories based upon it doubtless have convinced most of the American people that the Air Force acted as wanton wastrels with the public's funds in building the Air Force Academy.

The facts as subsequently set forth by Secretary of the Air Force James H. Douglas and by officials of the Academy and its Construction Agency in Colorado belie virtually all of the major charges contained in the report. They show, in fact, that the Air Force was conscientious and circumspect in its long range planning for this major educational institution and one to which the nation, for generations to come, will look for the production of the leaders of this great and most modern component of the National Defense team.

It is shown, for example, that construction costs are well within the totals authorized by Congress and that they will not exceed these amounts. The Committee's staff estimated that the ultimate cost would be "at least $300,900,757." Secretary Douglas says, unqualifiedly, that "this estimate is grossly excessive." The Air Force's own present estimate is that the total construction funds will not exceed $160,000,000. And it should be noted that $25,000,000 of this is due to rising costs of construction during the four years since the Academy was authorized.

Item by item, the charges in the report are refuted.

Both the U. S. Military Academy and the U. S. Naval Academy are well over a century old. Both have been developed over the years. The Air Force is responsible for producing a parallel institution to provide professional officers. It has tried to meet today's needs with modern buildings and modern equipment and to see far enough ahead so that too many additions and changes will not be needed in the near future.

We believe that before the passage of very much time the American people will be proud of their newest Academy and the men it graduates. And we do not believe they will begrudge the expenditures being made now.

Retired Pay Needs Protection

The Senate Armed Services Committee has taken a cursory look at the House-passed "Rueger Bill" but has not yet decided to act on the measure.

This is most unfortunate, particularly in light of the startling questions which have been raised about the legality of the Navy's disenrollment proceedings.

As disclosed in newly released executive testimony taken by the Kilday House Armed Services Subcommittee (THE JOURNAL, 2 Aug.), Counsel John R. Blandford believes the statute on which disenrollment action is based "may not be applied to retired officers." The Navy's statement that it has so "construed" the statute is not reassuring, especially in view of the frank admission that no legal authority (not even a court ruling) exists to deprive retired officers of their pay, even if disenrolled. The Navy says that disbursing officers "are compelled in the interests of self protection to refuse to continue retired pay once they are informed that the retired status has been terminated." This disturbing admission, alone, should prompt the Senate Committee to act on the "Rueger Bill" this session.

The Committee's failure to act immediately on the bill reportedly is based on an assumption that the entire problem can be settled administratively by a Defense Department directive setting up uniform disenrollment policies for all of the Services. The Navy is the only Service to resort to disenrollment.

However, the official position of the Department is that the decision is one of "national policy" and therefore solely within the province of the Congress. Furthermore, no administrative decision could restore the retired pay of those who have been disenrolled.

It is true, of course, that only two officers would be immediately affected by the bill, but action which deprives even one officer of the Armed Forces of his hard-earned retired pay should not be permitted to stand. Otherwise, the long-standing tradition of "earned" retirement is negated.

The Senate Committee should act on the bill without delay.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago (8 Aug. 1948)—The remarkable success of American and British airmen in supplying 2,000,000 residents of the non-Soviet sectors of Berlin with food, medicine and other essentials during the Russian land blockade was undoubtedly a major factor in the considerations that led Marshal Stalin to receive envoys of America, France and Britain at the historic conference at Moscow a few days ago. The record of our flyers in moving many thousands of tons of vitally needed supplies during the past few weeks constitutes an achievement unequalled in peacetime aviation history.

50 Years Ago (8 Aug. 1908)—We notice a growing disposition on the part of civil authorities to call upon troops to perform duties in connection with public order that are wholly within the province of properly constituted peace officers and should not be imposed upon soldiers. In the public mind there should be kept clearly marked the difference between a soldier and an officer of the peace, else the authority and dignity of each class will suffer.

90 Years Ago (8 Aug. 1868)—We are requested to notify all officers who served under Lieutenant General Sherman in the campaigns of 1863, 1864 and 1865, that a map illustrating these campaigns is now in the office of the chief engineer, Headquarters Military Division Missouri, St. Louis, Mo., for issue.

for your continued fight to bring to the attention of the Congress the needs of the Services—both active and retired.

It is hoped that enough of the members of Congress read your publication to realize that we who have taken our retirement should have the same consideration we have had in the past, and also in the present and in the future and be included in the "New Pay Bill" as to retirement pay and not be relegated to the "bottom drawer" which bears the label "Granted a 6% Increase" simply because we took our retirement too soon.

Many of the retired officers and enlisted men of all ranks and grades of all the armed forces gave the best part of their lives to the service of their country, and upon reaching the required age or number of years necessary to qualify for retirement, they retired. Too many of them are no longer able to work in civil life—age is against them. Yet, the cost of living goes up, and up and when Congress sees fit to grant a "Pay Increase" to the Armed Services the time honored tradition of including the retired members in the "Pay Bill" is thrown out and he gets a 6% pay increase.

A man could retire say on 31 May, 1958 and get let's say $255.00 per month retired pay. His buddy with whom he had soldiered all his military career, would retire in June the same year and get let's say $100.00 per month more due to the "New Pay Bill." GOOD OLD 6%!

Please "Mr. Congress" when you pass a "Pay Bill" why not continue the Old Tradition and include us "Retired Has-beens" we still have to pay the high cost of living increases just the same as the "Active Duty Boys" and the "Future Retired."

MAJOR—ARMY—RETIRED.

Comptroller General Guards Federal Pocketbook; Decisions Affect Service Families

(During recent weeks, the Comptroller General of the United States has made a number of decisions affecting the pay and allowances of Service families throughout the world. The following special report tells the story of how the Comptroller carries out his duties and describes prospective changes in his relationship to the Services.)

At the entrance to Uncle Sam's pocketbook stands Joseph Campbell, Comptroller of the United States.

With the aid of the far-flung resources of the General Accounting Office, Mr. Campbell is the final authority on what payments may or may not legally be made by the government.

He and his organization publish decisions or take actions directly affecting thousands of military personnel, the Armed Services as a whole and Government contractors.

In the near future, for example, the Comptroller is expected to outline what retired Title III Reservists may be eligible for retroactive pay. He also could provide thousands of dollars in future and back pay to large numbers of retired military officers recalled to active duty and subsequently re-retired.

Favorable decisions on either of these cases could mean huge cash benefits, some in four and five figures, for large numbers of military families.

Within the last month alone the Comptroller has decided a multitude of questions concerning the new Armed Forces Pay Act, revision of overseas station per diem allowances, travel and transportation allowances, contract payments and retired benefits.

Because, like the mythical guardian Cerberus, the Comptroller holds a strategic, yet sometimes shadowy position along the Government's financial pathways, Service people are apt to ask: What is this three-headed monster? Why is he there? How will he affect me?

Letter of the Law

The Comptroller's basic and traditional function is to assure that all Government expenditures are made in accordance with law.

To do this, he conducts periodic checks on Government auditing procedures and at the request of the Secretaries of Government departments and disbursing officers publishes legally binding decisions on what payments may or may not be made.

Many of his decisions may mean extra pay or allowances for thousands of military families. Others, like the recent decision reducing the retired pay of 10 Public Health Service Assistant Surgeons General, could force the return of many thousands of dollars in overpayments to the Government.

When drafting his legal decisions, the Comptroller relies heavily upon his battery of highly trained and specialized lawyers in the General Accounting Office's Office of the General Counsel. Here Mr. John T. Burns, Associate General Counsel, acts as the top authority on military legislation.

Decisions Are Final

Legal decisions of the Comptroller are final and binding in all cases. They can be overruled only by Congress or the Courts.

However, even where the courts, such as the U. S. Court of Claims, overrule the Comptroller's decision, he is bound to follow the Court's ruling only in the cases which have been tried. He is not obliged to use current court decisions as precedents in determining the rights of others similarly situated.

This provides the frequent example of the Comptroller openly refuting Court decisions and refusing to follow them.

Sometimes he will remain aloof from court decisions for a relatively short time, until all the legal means of having the decision reversed have been exhausted. Then, he will finally give in and extend the benefits of the decision to others in similar circumstances.

There have been many cases, however, where the Comptroller has permanently refused to recognize court decisions as precedents. Short of new legislation, there is no way to force him to reverse his position.

Global Spade Work

World-wide military spade work for the Comptroller is done by the GAO's Defense Accounting and Auditing Division, headed by Mr. Lawrence J. Powers.

Working closely with the Field Operations Division, Mr. Power's group maintains a constant check on military auditing procedures and practices, periodically singling out critical areas for special study.

During these audits, payments of doubtful validity are referred to the Comptroller General and GAO Legal Counsel for final decision and remedy. Criminal violations on the part of military and civilian personnel are referred to the Department of Justice and the military departments for prosecution.

This spot check on auditing procedures and payments, called a fidelity audit, has been a traditional part of the Comptroller's role throughout the history of the United States.

A more recent role, emerging only within the last decade, sees the Comptroller's shop concentrating not only on the legality of expenditures, but on their effectiveness and economy as well.

GAO teams are sent throughout the world to study military purchasing, contracting, requirements, and management, as well as the overall effectiveness and potential effectiveness of military programs.

One of the major fields of concentration at the present time, says Mr. Powers, is logistics, where the GAO has been quick to point out areas of possible improvement. In this field, GAO teams perform comprehensive audits on selected military programs, concentrating their efforts on requirements determination, contract administration, supply management and distribution and surplus property disposal.

Inadequate Administration

Businesses performing negotiated contracts for the Military Departments are also subject to the audit controls and investigations of the General Accounting Office. These audits many times lead to a redetermination of contract prices and substantial refunds to the Government.

"Our audits," Comptroller General Campbell says, "have disclosed weaknesses in the administration of contracts such as inadequate analysis of contractors' forward price estimates, and in administrative regulations such as lack of adequate cost principles applicable to negotiated contracts. We have found that such weaknesses in agency techniques for evaluating contractors' price proposals have resulted, in some cases, in contractors realizing profits substantially in excess of those contemplated during negotiations."

Overpayments Cited

Military Audit Branches of the GAO disclosed more than $4 million in overpayments of pay and allowances to military personnel during 1957. The branches are located in Indianapolis (Army), Cleveland (Navy), Denver (Air Force), and Washington, D. C. (Marine Corps).

In addition, during a recent three-year period, the Comptroller questioned the propriety of over $9.5 million for the travel of military families. "Our audit indicated," the Comptroller said, "that it was doubtful whether the travel had been performed as claimed, or if performed, whether it was for the purpose of establishing a bona fide residence as contemplated by law."

Over half a million dollars in erroneous mustering out payments were also noted by the Comptroller during 1957.

Established In 1789

Although the origins of the Comptroller office are to be found in both the early American and English legislatures, the Comptroller post was first established within the Treasury Department by an act of 2 September 1789. His principal duties were to decide the lawfulness and justice of claims and accounts, to supervise the adjustment and preservation of accounts, and countersigning warrants for prosecuting delinquent revenue officers and collecting debts due to the United States.

In 1894 the Comptroller of the Treasury was given the power to render legally binding decisions on the legality of government expenditures.

It was not until 1921 that the present General Accounting Office was formed, under the direction of the Comptroller General, to audit and settle all public accounts, settle and adjust all claims for and against the government, and to prescribe forms, systems and procedures for appropriation and fund accounting.

For many years after its origin, the GAO functioned primarily in Washington, D. C., where it audited all vouchers sent in from the field.

Evolutionary Changes

As World War II approached, the GAO expanded its activities to establish field offices in various parts of the United States. At the present time, it has 19 regional field offices in the U. S. in addition to units abroad and at the various military finance centers.

Formally designated an organ of the Congress in 1950, the General Accounting Office is still undergoing evolutionary changes which will see it delve even more deeply into the financial and logistics operations of the Military Departments. Its recent operations, in marked contrast to those before WW II, show an increasing tendency to informality, especially in working with the finance centers of the Military Services.

This informal relationship, coupled with constant consultations, GAO officials assert, will continue to decrease erroneous payments to military personnel, and thus reduce the hardship on military families who could be forced to return the money to the Government.

Defense Info Unit Gets New Name, Orville Splitt Heads News Services Office

ASSISTANT Secretary of Defense for Public Affairs Murray Snyder has redesignated the Office of Public Information as the Office of News Services, effective 4 August.

The Pentagon said the title change was made to indicate more clearly the function performed by the Office and to avoid the confusion which results when the titles "Public Affairs" and "Public Information" are used interchangeably.

Mr. Orville S. Splitt has been appointed Acting Director of the Office of News Services and retains his present title as Chief of the News Division.

There are four separate Offices under guidance of Assistant Secretary of Defense Snyder, including the Office of Public Services, the Office of Security Review, the Office of Declassification Policy, and the Office of News Services.

Each functions apart from the other three, rather than interlocking as has been the case in the past.

B/G Shaw Heads USMC Development Center

Brig. Gen. Samuel R. Shaw has assumed command of the Marine Corps Development Center, Quantico, Va., reporting from Headquarters where he was Deputy Chief of Staff for Research and Development.

He succeeded Brig. Gen. Ronald D. Salmon, who became Commanding General, Marine Corps Air Bases, Western Area, and Commanding General, MCAS El Toro, Calif.

HONOR GEN. CHENNAULT

Lake Charles AFB, La., will be redesignated Chennault AFB 1 November in honor of the late Lt. Gen. Claire L. Chennault.

The Air Force has utilized Lake Charles as a SAC medium bombardment training base since 1951.

General Chennault, who led the Flying Tigers and the 14th Air Force to victory over the Japanese in World War II, died 27 July 1958.

HISTORIC NAVY RESISTANCE to suggestions—some from Capitol Hill—that it follow Army, Air Force, and Marine Corps procedures in requiring selection for advancement from O-7 to O-8 appears to have sprung a leak. The Chief of Naval Personnel now says he favors such action.

UNLIKE OFFICERS in other Services, a Navy rear admiral in O-7 rank (one star in the Army, Air Force and Marine Corps) at present moves to O-8 (major general) without having to face selection board action. It's an automatic advancement, based simply on slicing the number of rear admirals aboard in half.

SELECTION OF REAR ADMIRALS for advancement from lower half to upper half would mean, of course, that some would be forced out, as is the case in the other Services. There's little question that the Navy's sudden willingness to abandon the automatic advancement system stems directly from its critical "hump" problem and the urgent need to accelerate retirements in captain and commander ranks. It would hardly be equitable to force some officers to retire short of 30 years service, and let others in flag rank advance without the competition of selection board consideration.

IT'S A SMALL ADVANTAGE, but nonetheless one that is widely recognized in the Services, that Navy rear admirals of the lower half wear two-star insignia, while their opposite numbers in the other Services wear only the single star of a brigadier general. It's sometimes the case in the absence of ready access to an official Register with dates of rank that a rear admiral of the lower half is given precedence at a public function or social gathering over a senior officer in another Service.

THREAT OF ENEMY AIR ATTACK is not the only source of anxiety these days at headquarters of General Earle E. Partridge's North American Air Defense Command at Ent AFB, Colo. Great pressure is being exerted by Denver political leaders to force a shift of NORAD from Colorado Springs to facilities being vacated by the U.S. Air Force Academy at Lowry AFB. General Partridge opposes the suggested shift. Some newly assigned officers to the Ent headquarters say they are hesitating to purchase homes until the issue is resolved.

REVIVED DISCUSSION of financial and contracting operations at the U. S. Air Force Academy can be expected early in the next session of Congress. The Comptroller General will submit a complete report of financial operations at the Academy. In the past, the Comptroller has been critical of some Air Force projects, including the transfer of finance activities to Denver, Colo.

THE MOST EXPENSIVE COAST GUARD SHIP in the history of that service—the Coast Guard celebrated its 168th anniversary 4 August—will be an atomic icebreaker. Construction has been approved by Congress. Estimated cost of the vessel is $40-$60 million. Eight of the nine icebreakers now operated by the Coast Guard and Navy are of pre-WWII design. It's expected that at least three years will be required for construction of the nuclear-powered icebreaker.

ARMY AVIATION STATURE continues to rise. Latest advance is the appointment of Brig. Gen. Richard D. Meyer, USA, as Deputy Chief of Transportation for Aviation, U.S. Army—a new billet.

SOME ARMY MISSILE OFFICIALS are surprised that the Chrysler Corporation has not made a stronger public information effort in connection with the successful Explorer firings with the Jupiter-C. These Army people say that they are under some wraps because of the DoD desire to prevent inter-Service controversy, but they suggest that such restrictions do not apply to the Chrysler people. Noteworthy is the fact that Secretary of Defense McElroy has promised a decision—certainly before the end of the year—between the Air Force's Thor IRBM, for which the Douglas Aircraft Company is the prime contractor, and the Army's Jupiter, for which Chrysler is the prime builder.

A PHOTOGRAPHY ENTHUSIAST, Maj. Gen. James E. Briggs, USAF, Superintendent of the Air Force Academy, has a choice location for his hobby. Few sites anywhere in the world provide more exciting challenges for a photographer—professional or amateur—than the spectacular setting of the new Academy. There's just one problem: how to find time for extracurricular activities.

LT. GEN. JAMES M. GAVIN, USA-Ret., in his forthcoming book, "War And Peace In the Space Age," makes a reference at one point to the fact that some outstanding officers have held the position of Chairman of the JCS, including General of the Army Omar N. Bradley and General Nathan F. Twining. It's obvious that General Gavin did not inadvertently omit the name of Admiral Arthur Radford, USN-Ret.

A ONETIME NIGHT CLUB will be the temporary home of the U. S. Air Force Academy Superintendent. It's part of a complex of eight buildings and 20 acres on the mammoth site, acquired at a total cost of $265,000 in connection with land purchases for the Academy. Congress has authorized $75,000 for Superintendent's quarters, but Maj. Gen. James E. Briggs determined that high costs of site preparation "would prevent our getting $75,000 worth of house." So the decision was made to use part of the buildings—they are eight miles away from the main Academy activities—which had been unoccupied for two years. The 1927 structure, owned by Mrs. A. E. Carlton, widow of a miner who struck it rich at Cripple Creek, Colo., has seen service as a night club.

AIR FORCE ACADEMY OFFICIALS are certain they will have to defend shotgun charges during the months ahead that the Superintendent lives in a $265,000 home. It's not true. Actual cost is closer to $10,000—the amount needed to furnish the quarters, above about $10,000 worth of furnishings donated to the Academy, and the value of furnishings owned by General and Mrs. Briggs.

THE DEFENSE DEPARTMENT HAS NEVER RELEASED the fact that on 1 May the Army advised the Senate Armed Services Committee it had terminated production of the Navy-developed land-based Talos antiaircraft missile, built by the Radio Corporation of America. This information is made public in a newly released Committee report on the military construction authorization bill. No mention was made of the cancellation during the Army's Project Ammo press demonstration at Ft. Bliss, Tex., late in June when the Talos was demonstrated.

THE ARMY'S DRIVE for men in the guided missile and special weapons field will be strengthened by a new regulation authorizing qualified individuals to enlist or reenlist for courses at the Ordnance Guided Missile School, Redstone Arsenal, Ala., or advanced training at the Armed Forces Special Weapons Project, Sandia Base, N. M. Assignment to these courses will depend upon successful completion of the Electronics Entry Course at the Signal School, Ft. Monmouth, N. J.

THE RANK OF COMMODORE has been retired from the active list of the Navy. The last officer to hold that rank on active duty was Commo. Richard W. Bates. He was retired 1 May 1949 for physical disability but was recalled in July of that year for duty at the Naval War College, Newport, R. I. For nine years, he has been Director of the WWII Battle Evaluation Group, charged with the task of preparing critical analyses of major WWII naval battles. Commodore Bates rejoined the retired list with the rank of rear admiral.

THE POST-RETIREMENT PROMOTION of Commodore Bates, which is based on his having won a combat decoration, points up an advantage that Navy and Marine Corps officers have over those in the Army and Air Force. The law authorizes "hero rank" promotions for Navy and Marine Corps officers, but not for those in the Army and Air Force. Although extra pay is no longer involved in the end-of-career advancements, they are of importance in the matter of prestige, particularly when it comes to civilian employment.

JAPAN'S HIGHEST DECORATION that can be given a foreigner for distinguished civic and community service, the Third Order of Merit with the Order of the Sacred Treasure, has been presented in Tokyo by Director General Gisen Sato of the Japan Defense Agency to Col. Frederick M. O'Neill, USAF. The colonel formerly commanded Itazuke AB near Fukuoka. Among the deeds for which he was honored were the support of orphanages by his airmen and the use of base fire engines to pump water to help drought-stricken farmers.

GREECE HAS BECOME the 11th NATO nation to send students to the Ordnance Guided Missile School at Huntsville, Ala. S/Sgt. George Kotsakis of the Royal Hellenic Air Force is taking preliminary courses as an interpreter in preparation for the arrival of additional Greek airmen late this month.

THE ARMY GUIDED MISSILE SCHOOL identifies itself in news releases as "the Space Academy," a name that is causing some consternation in the other Services.

SENATOR JOHN STENNIS (D-MISS.), Chairman of the Armed Services Committee which has urged Secretary of Defense McElroy to "seriously question" overseas family travel policies, has made other recommendations during the current session of Congress which have provoked concern among military people. Head of the Subcommittee which acted favorably on the pay legislation, he followed this up with the suggestion that the Senate consider next year a plan that would require members of the Armed Forces to contribute to a retirement fund like other Federal employees.

ANOTHER SUGGESTION made by Senator Stennis was that persons who retire early from the Armed Forces should be penalized. He also has criticized the Pentagon for having too many colonels and Navy captains and won a promise that the Services will do something about this situation.

It's Personal
... you understand

Yes, insurance is a personal thing to GPM. It's personal in its protection, personal in its service to your particular needs, personal in its special plans for officers, enlisted men and their families. That's why we have agents and branch offices throughout the country to serve our policyholders better. Our agents are former military people, selected and trained to specialize in military insurance. We think you'll find GPM and its agents ready and able to give you personal service on your insurance needs.

GPM now serves more than 55,000 policyholders with over 177 million dollars of insurance in force. This year, more than $270,000 will be paid out in dividends to policyholders. During our nearly quarter century of service we have paid to policyholders and beneficiaries almost 7 million dollars. Recommended by Best and all other recognized rating authorities.

Air Force Widows Are Academy Hostesses

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.

TWO Air Force widows will be among the first staff members of the Air Force Academy to receive housing here.

They are Mrs. Edward McComas, Cadet Hostess, and her Assistant, Mrs. Steven Turner.

Maj. Gen. James E. Briggs, USAF, Academy Superintendent, told a JOURNAL reporter that the selection of the Hostess and Assistant Hostess required consideration of hundreds of applications.

"It's impossible to overestimate their importance," said General Briggs.

Gail McComas has been with the Academy for three years. "Peege" Turner joined the staff last February.

Initially, until housing is available, they will occupy rooms in the BOQ at the Colorado Springs site, but later at the insistence of General Briggs, will be provided with Capehart housing.

Mrs. McComas and Mrs. Turner both had volunteered to find off-base housing, but the Superintendent, noting their need to be on frequent duty at night, made the decision that they would be provided with a permanent home on the base as quickly as possible.

AF O'sea Commands May Extend Tours

Major air commanders have been authorized to extend overseas tours for any period up to a year beyond the 48 months normally considered the maximum overseas tour to prevent hardships.

The authority was given to the major air commanders to prevent such hardships as inability to obtain visas for foreign-born wives or adopted children, or illness of dependents which would prevent their return to the U. S. at normal rotation time.

Air Force personnel who have already been reported for reassignment when such extensions are determined to be necessary also are eligible to be extended in their overseas station beyond the 48 month limit.

The message (PMP 135920) also authorizes major air commanders to extend overseas tours of personnel below the grade of colonel for any length of time under any one of the following conditions:

1. A person is under investigation by a military or civilian agency.
2. A person is awaiting trial by court-martial.
3. A person is either under investigation, charged and awaiting trial, convicted and has an appeal pending, or is under sentence as a result of actions of foreign authorities.
4. A person is required as a witness for a court-martial or investigation when it has been determined that a deposition is not acceptable.
5. Personnel have been recommended for appearance before a board of officers, or when final action is pending as a result of appearance before a board of officers.

B. W. McLaughlin, R. F. Shaefer, R. E. Greer, H. W. C. Shelton, L. D. Chapman and J. C. Martin, jr.

Members of the Board of the Air Force Officers' Wives' Club present were Mesdames C. G. McKinney, jr., R. E. Clark and Clay Thompson.

OFFICER-AUTHOR—Mrs. J. E. Childers, Program Chairman for the Zama Area Officer's Wives' Club, chats with Capt. Kenneth L. Oden, author of the humorous fictional life of Air Force personnel in Japan, "Yea, Brave Coward." Assigned as Postal Officer at Fuchu and Yamada Air Stations, Captain Oden was guest speaker at a recent brunch-meeting of the women's group held at the Camp Zama Officer's Open Mess. Air Force Needs, Will Train G.P.'s

The Air Force needs and is willing to train 200 additional family doctors.

Currently expanding its residency training program, the Air Force says that these physicians, known as General Practitioners, play a dominant role in the successful accomplishment of the Air Force medical mission. What the Air Force family doctor achieves in personal satisfaction and improved relationships with Air Force men and their families, Air Force Headquarters says, produces real Air Force dividends not measurable by statistics or dollars.

The specialized two-year Residency training program covers one year in medicine, including pediatrics and psychiatry and one year in surgery, including traumatic surgery, fractures and gynecology.

Residencies are now available at Maxwell AFB, Ala., and some civilian hospitals. By July of next year the program will include hospitals at Andrews AFB, Md., Keesler AFB, Miss., and Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio.

Air Force doctors interested in the general practice residency may write directly to the Air Force Surgeon General, Washington 25, D. C.

Surgeon General Gives Go-Ahead To Periodical

Army Medical activities have been given permission to subscribe to medical periodicals for periods over 1 year directly from publishers "when it is proved more economical to take advantage of such subscriptions."

Clarifying subscription procedures, the Surgeon General said in Circular 715-6, that foreign periodicals may not be ordered from agencies outside the Continental United States without his prior approval. Foreign periodicals purchased from publishers and dealers within the U. S. do not require prior purchase approval of the Surgeon General.

Construction Action

the Senate.
Authority for both hospitals is contained in the final conference version of the annual authorization bill for military construction. Unless funds are appropriated, however, neither hospital can be constructed.

In agreeing to a compromise authorization bill for military construction, House and Senate members approved a $1.6 billion program including $952.4 million for the Air Force, $325.9 million for the Navy and Marine Corps, $309.4 million for the Army and $50 million for the Department of Defense.

The Administration had asked for military construction authority totaling $1,684,000,000. The House cut the amount down to $1,658,491,000. The Senate made further reductions to $1,644,641,000, and conferees from both Houses reduced the total further, to $1,637,875,000.

Only $1,218,815,000 in actual appropriations has been approved by the House, and the appropriations bill is now nearing final Senate action.

Conferees on the authorization bill also restored authority for the construction of 1,000 units of Capehart family housing at the Navy Base, San Diego, Calif. This had been eliminated by the Senate.

They also extended until 1961 the period within which the Defense Department must convert, rehabilitate or destroy substandard housing now occupied by military personnel on a reduced-rent basis.

The final authorization bill contains authority also for the construction of 143 National Guard armories at a cost of about $21 million.

The conferees agreed to Senate action in approving construction authority for Moody AFB, Ga., in the amount of $5.4 million, including troop housing.

Services Will Cut Immunization Shots

There will be fewer sore arms in the Armed Forces as a result of a new all-Service program which cuts the number and frequency of immunization shots.

The program reflects the advice of the Commission on Immunization of the Armed Forces Epidemiological Board, which found that fewer vaccinations are required with recently developed serums.

The present practice which calls for a booster typhoid-paratyphoid immunization every three years has been reduced so that only two boosters are given at four-year intervals for military personnel who remain in the U. S., Canada, Alaska, and Hawaii. Further boosters are required only when the individual travels to another area of the world.

Similarly, cholera and typhus vaccines are given only in preparation for travel to certain areas of the world.

After an individual has received his basic series of shots, the series need never be repeated.

Another change in the Service regulations provides for the first time that all personnel under age 40 will be required to receive the poliomyelitis vaccination before travelling outside the continental U. S.

The new regulations provide that separate immunization is not required for diphtheria, but is included in a new tetanus-diphtheria vaccine.

Navy Awards $22 Million To Westinghouse Corp.

The Navy has announced the award of contracts totaling $22 million to the Westinghouse Electric Corporation for production of shipboard radio transmitters and radar equipment.

One contract, worth more than $8 million, calls for the production of an advanced air-search radar for use on cruisers, aircraft carriers and other surface ships. Additional quantities of shipboard radar of conventional design will be produced under a separate contract worth over $1 million.

Another Navy contract, for more than $12 million, calls for the production of medium and high frequency communications transmitters designed for surface and submarine service.

All of these equipments will be manufactured at the Electronics Division's plant near Friendship Airport, between Baltimore, Md., and Washington, D. C.

The new radar equipment, capable of detecting aircraft at great ranges employs a revolutionary electronic circuit technique, a design feature considered a technical breakthrough in the evolution of shipboard air-search radar.

With this radar, it is now possible to obtain results that are identical to those obtained with a radar of conventional design having many times as much peak power.

A model of the equipment, developed by Westinghouse engineers under a previous Navy contract, has successfully undergone testing.

Particularly suitable for installation on submarines because of its unique arrangement, the communications transmitter being contracted for can be used either for communicating between ships or for communications between ships at sea and land stations.

VAdm. William Alexander Glassford, USN-Ret.

Burial services were held this week at Arlington National Cemetery, Washington, D. C., for VAdm. William Alexander Glassford, USN-Ret., 72, who died 30 July in California of a heart attack.

Born at San Francisco, Admiral Glassford was graduated from the U. S. Naval Academy with the Class of 1906. While commanding the destroyer Shaw during WWI, his ship collided with another in the English Channel. Afire and with her bow completely severed, Admiral Glassford saved the Shaw by bringing her 50 miles into port. At the outbreak of WWII, he was Commander of the Yangtze Patrol in China and later assumed command of Task Force 5 in the Pacific, finally becoming Commander of the U. S. Naval Forces, Southwest Pacific and de facto Commander-in-Chief of the Asiatic Fleet. While serving as Minister in French West Africa in 1943, he was appointed the additional duty of President Roosevelt's representative to Liberia with the title of Ambassador. Admiral Glassford was retired from active duty in 1946 and had since made his home at Santa Barbara, Calif.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Henrietta Sherwood Glassford of 203 Middle Rd., Santa Barbara; two daughters, Mrs. John F. Gibson of 1914 Connecticut Ave., N. W., Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Jacob D. Beam, wife of the U. S. Ambassador to Poland; one son, Mr. W. A. Glassford, 3d, LaGrange, Ill.; four grandchildren and four great-grandchildren; and his brother, Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, USA-Ret., La Jolla, Calif.

Mrs. Linelle Blackburn Carter

Burial services were held 1 August at the U. S. Military Academy Cemetery, West Point, for Mrs. Linelle Blackburn Carter, 51, wife of Col. Richard S. Carter, USAF, of Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, who died at Wright-Patterson AFB 29 July.

Colonel and Mrs. Carter were married at West Point in June 1931, following his graduation from the U. S. Military Academy. Through the years, she had taken an active part in Air Force Women's Club activities at many different bases, and had served as Vice-President and a Member of the Board of Governors of the Wright-Patterson AFB Women's Club, as well as Co-chairman of the Red Cross with hundreds of hours as a Gray Lady. Mrs. Carter was known to many in the Air Force, too, for her work in dramatics, having acted in and directed many skits and plays. She had participated greatly in organizing the Wright-Patterson kindergarten, the Women's Club Garden Circle and the publication of the Club's first Handbook.

In addition to her husband, she leaves three sisters.

"Magnificent Action" By Blue Angel Pilot

Lt. John R. Dewenter, a member of the "Blue Angels" flight demonstration team, has been commended by Admiral Arleigh A. Burke, Chief of Naval Operations, for landing a disabled F11F Tiger jet on a Buffalo, N. Y., airport 2 August, instead of ejecting over a populated area.

The Lieutenant chose to remain with jet despite the fact that the plane's temperature soared beyond the point where an ejection is considered an absolute pilot safety requirement.

The Blue Angels were participating in an air show over Clarence, N. Y., which was holding a sesquicentennial celebration.

The pilot brought his overheated and severely vibrating plane down from 8,000 feet and landed on a 5,600 foot runway. The high speed necessary in the emergency landing caused the jet to overrun the runway by several hundred feet. The other members of the team continued the aerial demonstration.

Admiral Burke's message to Lieutenant Dewenter reads:

"Your magnificent action in landing your aircraft rather than hazarding the lives of the civilian populace reflect the highest credit on yourself, the Blue Angels, and the Navy. Well Done."

from the U. S. Military Academy in 1905. In WWI, he saw service with the 41st Division in France and as Chief of Staff of the American troops in Italy. Commanding the coast and Antiaircraft Artillery in the Hawaiian Islands at the time of Pearl Harbor, General Burgin spent the war years in the Pacific, ending as Commanding General of the Central Pacific Base Command. Following his retirement from active duty in 1946, General Burgin had made his home at Prescott, where he was active in civic affairs and served as President of the Community Hospital Association and as President one year of the Rotary Club.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Winona Elizabeth Derby Burgin of Prescott.

Col. Henry Benjamin Clark, USA-Ret.

Private funeral services were held at San Diego, Calif., 27 July for Col. Henry B. Clark, USA-Ret., 84, who died at his San Diego home 25 July, with burial at Ft. Rosecrans National Cemetery.

A native of Wisconsin and a direct descendant of Dr. John Robinson, "Minister of the Pilgrim Fathers," who helped organize the sailing of the Mayflower, Colonel Clark was graduated from Beloit College, before entering and graduating from the U. S. Military Academy with the Class of 1899. His service included the assignment of Acting Superintendent of the Sequoia and Grant National Parks, participation in the Boxer Rebellion in 1900, the Philippine Insurrection and the Moro Expedition in Mindanao. During WWI, Colonel Clark took the 74th Coast Artillery overseas and commanded the railway Artillery near Verdun at the time of the Armistice, later joining the Civil Affairs Administration at Trier, Germany. He served on the War Department General Staff until his retirement from active duty in 1922, when he became President of the Sefton Manufacturing Corporation of Chicago. For 25 years, Colonel Clark was a director of the Container Corporation of America, from which he retired in 1956 because of ill health.

Surviving him are his widow, Mrs. Lena Sefton Clark of 3810 Narragansett Ave., San Diego; two sons, James D. Clark, San Diego, and Henry B. Clark, Jr., Honolulu; two stepsons, Franklin W. Wakefield, Jr., San Diego, and Joseph S. Wakefield, Hemet, Calif.; and 11 grandchildren.

Funeral services were held at the Ft. Myer, Va. Chapel 4 August for Col. Leslie Walter Allen, USAR-Ret., 52, who died suddenly at his home at Inverness, Fla., 30 July. Burial was at Arlington National Cemetery, with the Reverend Wilbur M. Sims of Springfield, Va., officiating.

Born at Buffalo, N. Y., Colonel Allen entered military service in 1929 as a commissary clerk in the Philippines. During WWII, he saw service in the European theater and in 1946 was assigned to the Office of The Quartermaster General. In 1951, Colonel Allen was named Advisor to the Quartermaster of the Iranian Army, in which capacity he served until 1953, when he returned to the Office of the Quartermaster General as Assistant Inspector General, Assistant Chief and, later, Chief of the Administrative Division. Following an assignment with the U. S. Army Pacific Command in 1956, Colonel Allen went to the Atlanta General Depot, where he served until his retirement from active duty in July 1957.

Overhaul Of Academy Appointments Urged To Eliminate "Waste And Heartbreak"

Members of Congress would lose their right to appoint young men to the Army, Navy and Air Force Academies under the terms of a bill introduced in the House 6 August by Representative Charles O. Porter (D-Ore).

Congressman Porter says the present Academy appointment system "results in waste and heartbreak" and does not provide "the best selection of candidates."

He told the House that "more than 50% of the young men appointed by Congressmen fail to pass the entrance examinations at West Point and Annapolis." Many others, he said, "don't even try for an appointment because they feel it is a matter of politics."

The Congressman, a USAFR Captain, has proposed legislation which would permit the Service Academies themselves to make the selections, acting through the Service Secretary. All appointments would be on an annual basis and would total 1,236 annually for each school, not counting sons of Congressional Medal of Honor winners or foreign students.

The bill also increases the number of appointments made to West Point and the Air Force Academy from among Regular enlisted men.

Congressman Porter said he was introducing the bill "at this late hour"

(Congress is nearing adjournment) so that Senators, Representatives and the public "can have an opportunity before the convening of the 86th Congress [next January] to consider the need for a better method of selecting these very important young men."

He said even if the changed system means a loss of votes for some members of the Congress, "the urgency of reform in the selection method requires action now. We must substitute expert objective procedures. We cannot afford any system other than the best in selecting these military leaders of tomorrow."

At present, he said, if a Congressman "tries to make a choice on objective facts, the burden on his office is tremendous even if he farms out the selection—as I do—to a blue ribbon committee."

He said he has come to the conclusion "that the selection of academy appointees by Congressmen results in waste and heartbreak more than half the time. The only way a Member of Congress can make a suitable selection is by using a lot of his own time and his staff's time. It is not enough to make the appointments of principals and alternates on the basis of their grades in a civil service test, which can tell little about the vital leadership qualities we need in these men."

matter up with the Armed Services Committee next year "and propose any amendments which they feel to be necessary" in the basic law.

He noted that the Pentagon is working "on the precise terms of a directive which would require dependents residing on military reservations or in Wherry or Capehart housing to use local uniformed services medical facilities—subject to the availability of space, facilities, and to the capabilities of the medical staff."

The "coming directive," he said, also will "reduce the medical care coverage to dependents in civilian facilities by eliminating certain types of care now authorized."

And, he added, the Pentagon interdepartmental group which is studying the problem, also is considering "the question of increasing the dependents' share of civilian medical care costs as a means of persuading more of them to choose military medical facilities."

Asks Evaluation

Senator Knowland suggested that the program changes "be put into effect and the results evaluated on the basis of experience in the coming year. This will give both the administrators and the beneficiaries an opportunity to adjust. Meanwhile, the full amount of funds requested for fiscal year 1959 should be approved because I am sure every cent will be needed."

The "drastic action" proposed by the Appropriations Committee, he said, will "have an adverse effect on the morale of our Armed Forces personnel. It will disrupt a program which, even in the brief time it has been in operation, has been working smoothly. It will probably not save a dime because the Department of Defense may have to ask for supplemental funds to meet obligations incurred under the contracts through which the program is administered."

Senator Knowland noted that one of the reasons advanced for curtailing the Medicare program "is the claim that cost of dependents' care in civilian facilities runs twice as high in some cases as the cost in military facilities." Costs per patient day for fiscal '57 are shown in the House Appropriations Committee report as $16.24 for the Navy, $26.42 for the Army and $24.64 for the Air Force. In civilian facilities, the cost is shown as $45 in 1957, but $50 at present.

Estimate Of Cost

A new study by the Bureau of the Budget shows, however, the total current cost for care of dependents in military hospitals "is estimated to be $43.67," which Senator Knowland said "is more nearly comparable to the $50 daily cost attributed to dependent care in civilian facilities. Thus, costs in civilian facilities for wives, husbands and children of Armed Forces personnel are not so much out of line as we were at first led to believe."

He also called to the attention of the Senate, the fact that the Surgeons General have testified that military hospitals were overcrowded before passage of the Medicare Act. "Surely, the Congress does not wish to return to such undesirable conditions," he said.

Senator Knowland declared that the Medicare program "has been of great value as a morale booster in the short time it has been in effect. It is one of those fringe benefits the Congress has granted to make military service more attractive so that skilled men will remain in uniform and strengthen our Armed Forces. Judging from the response of Service families in California, the Medicare program is filling a real need."

He urged the Senate not "to damage the good will built up among Service families by this laudable program."

Sen. Barrett's View

Senator Frank A. Barrett (R-Wyo.) joined in the fight to restore the Medicare funds. He said States like Wyoming would be discriminated against if the cut should be upheld. "Families of Servicemen living a long distance from military hospitals would be discriminated against, because it would be impossible for them to travel long distances to get to military hospitals. If they were not able to get treatment outside of military hospitals, they would not receive the benefits of the act at all."

This same argument was pointed up in THE JOURNAL (2 August).

Senator Barrett, a member of the Armed Services Committee, said, "Unless the Senate conferees insist on this amendment, it seems to me there will be discrimination against a large percentage of the families of servicemen. Some of them will get the benefits of the act, and some of them will not."

Family MediCare Funds Win Final O.K.

From first page—

make greater use of military medical facilities.

The Senate voted $70.2 million for family care, and its action prevailed in the Conference Committee on 6 August.

Both the House and Senate warned the Pentagon anew that full use must be made of military medical facilities in caring for Service families.

As the House and Senate conferees met, the Pentagon was preparing to issue new regulations which will require greater use of Armed Forces facilities.

Establishment of a dental care program for Service families was recommended in a report issued by the Dental Advisory Committee to the Office for Dependents' Medical Care. Specifically, the recommendation covers two categories of care: 1. Care in uniformed services facilities based upon availability of space and facilities and the capabilities of the dental staff.

2. The initiation of a civilian dental care program.

Highlights of the Committee's findings:

"Comprehensive dental care is an integral part of basic health care and essential to health maintenance.

"The lack of a dental care provision is considered the primary defect of the Medicare Program.

Re-enlistment Factor

"Dependents' dental care is one of several important factors considered by enlisted personnel at the time of a re-enlistment decision.

"A sound dental care program for dependents of uniformed service personnel can be developed and administered.

"Facilities for fiscal administration of a dental care program are available.

"The establishment of a sound dental care program for dependents of uniformed service personnel will require additional statutory authority."

The Senate's earlier action in restoring the $10.2 million cut in the Medicare program was taken on an amendment proposed by Senator William F. Knowland (R-Calif.), the Minority Leader.

Senator Knowland noted that the Appropriations Committee had said the cut was not intended to work hardships on Service families, but, he declared, "I greatly fear that, despite the hopes and intent of the committee, the monetary reductions and the limitation will work hardships and difficulties."

The Senate Republican Leader said he agrees the Medicare program "can be tightened somewhat without hurting either the quality of medical care for dependents or the morale of our Service families," but he said, "I do not think this is the way to tighten it." He told the Senate that the proposed cut "is too drastic a reduction at this time."

Senator Knowland said he believes the Appropriations Committee performed a very useful service in pointing out that there is a need to tighten up some of the regulations under which the program has been operated. But, he said the proper way to change the regulations is for the Defense Department to take the

Budget Highlights

Here are some of the major highlights of the final House-Senate action on the fiscal '59 military budget. As approved by a Conference Committee on 6 August, the final budget:

- Retains Army and Marine Corps strengths at 900,000 and 200,000, respectively, but eliminates language making it mandatory to maintain these force levels.

- Includes $136 million for Strategic airlift, not requested by the Administration.

- Eliminates funds for 13 B-52G bombers.

- Adds $21.8 million for jet training planes.

- Approves $417,000 for the Defense Department Office of Public Affairs—$32,000 more than the Senate voted, but $33,000 less than the House endorsed.

- Restores House cuts in Operations and Maintenance funds for all Services.

- Restores $225 million in funds for procurement of aircraft spares.

- Approves mandatory language for an Army National Guard with an average strength of 400,000 and an Army Reserve end strength of 300,000.

- Requires MATS to spend $80 million of its funds for commercial air transport.

Martin Names Subs For Pershing Missile

The Army and The Martin Company, Orlando, Fla., have selected four major subcontractors for the new solid propellant Pershing missile system.

The Martin Company is the prime weapon system contractor for Pershing, selective range, two-stage, inertially guided, ballistic missile being developed under supervision of the Army Ordnance Missile Command.

As prime contractor, Martin is teamed with the Army Ballistic Missile Agency, Huntsville, Ala., for research and development, reliability, testing and production of the missile and associated ground equipment.

A subcontract for the inertial guidance stable platform and associated equipment was awarded to Bendix Eclipse-Division, Teterboro, N. J.

Bulova Watch Company, of Long Island, N. Y., was named subcontractor for the fusing and arming system.

Bulova was selected after extensive physical surveys by a Martin team working in conjunction with Picatinny Arsenal personnel who have the technical supervisory responsibility for the fusing and arming system.

Responsibility for the design, development and production of the Pershing's propulsion system was awarded to Thiokol Chemical Corp., Huntsville, Ala.

Thiokol is one of the leaders in the solid propellant field and has considerable experience in the development of extremely large solid rockets. Facilities at Redstone Arsenal are available and will be used by Thiokol for initial development of solid propellant rocket motors for Pershing.

Thiokol is also producing the solid propellant rocket motor for the Army's new Lacrosse guided missile which is in production at Martin's Orlando plant.

Thompson Products Accessories Division of Cleveland was awarded a subcontract for the manufacture of a transporter-erector-launcher. This type of mobile unit is new and will permit Pershing to be transported to an unprepared site, erected, and fired in a matter of minutes.

With the new transporter-erector-launcher, Pershing will have the mobility of smaller weapons in the Army's family of missiles. Operating on a "shoot and scoot" principle, Pershing will be both plane and helicopter transportable.

In addition to its work on the Army's Pershing and Lacrosse, Martin-Orlando is in production on the Navy's Bullpup, an air-to-surface guided missile, and Missile Master, an electronic control system for air defense which is being built for the Army Signal Corps.

Tightened Travel Policies Could Force Military Families To Remain At Home

the Committee's recommendations or to decide on a course of action. However, it can be expected that a task force or study group will be appointed to dig into the knotty problem before Congress comes back to ask more questions next January.

Service families, meanwhile, will be raising some questions of their own:

• Will future travel of families to overseas "areas of potential combat" be halted completely?

• Will dependents already stationed in such areas be ordered home?

• What constitutes an area of "potential combat"? Is it likely that all major areas where families are now permitted to accompany the Armed Forces will fall into this broad category?

• If dependent travel is curtailed, will overseas duty tours be shortened to permit families to be together more often? No answers to these questions were hinted by the Armed Services Committee, although the group did point out that the cost of maintaining and providing logistical support (including various kinds of dependent support) for overseas installations "could exceed their military value."

The Committee noted that, at present, there are approximately 280 major overseas bases utilized by U. S. military forces throughout the world, not counting small, isolated stations. As of January, this year, the Committee said, 40.3% of all U. S. armed forces were stationed either abroad or with the operating forces of the Navy, afloat or mobile.

In its report, the Committee also pointed out that "the Department of Defense total of military and civilian personnel for overseas and foreign countries decreased during the 14-month period ending 31 March 1957, from approximately 690,000 to approximately 640,000." But during this same time, "the overseas dependent population increased from approximately 348,000 to approximately 400,000."

Logistical support for this force, the Committee said, "consists of indigenous civilian employees, ship and airlift tonnage, schools, commissaries, medical facilities, and other items, all of which constitute a substantial outflow of cash."

Figures quoted by the Committee from an unidentified "national publication" show that 507,000 members of military families are stationed in the Far East, Alaska, Hawaii, the Caribbean, North Africa and Europe.

The Committee said these figures "are obviously not completely accurate, but they are sufficient to show the order of magnitude. In fact the trend apparent is toward increasing overseas costs as personnel strengths even though in many instances the military figures are decreasing."

Taking a hard look at the total U. S. overseas effort, the Committee also noted that MSTs, during a single year, "carried nearly 250,000 tons of household effects and that MATS, one year, "transported close to 60,000 U. S. civilians and dependents from this country to their overseas destinations (this does not count almost $400 million of Government money used to charter privately owned transportation space during the same period)."

During one twelve-month period, the report states, "nearly 40,000 shipments of personal effects were dispatched out of single east coast port."

$10,000 A Move

The Committee said it is estimated that "it costs approximately $10,000 to move an average family overseas."

Two other overseas "problems" were also tackled by the Committee: family housing and the isolation of U. S. installations.

"In many overseas areas our installations have become self-sufficient and most isolated local American communities, completely equipped with their own clubs, shopping centers, theaters, hotels and transportation service," the Committee said.

"While it has often been said that our personnel overseas represent our 'ambassadors,' the Committee cannot help but wonder if this isolation of American installations does not in fact occasion at times more resentment than it does a friendly attitude."

In its final conclusions and recommendations the Committee called upon the Secretary "to exercise now and in the future continued and greater vigilance to insure that overseas construction is kept to a minimum and is consistent with approved military policies and that the stationing of dependents in areas of potential combat be seriously questioned."

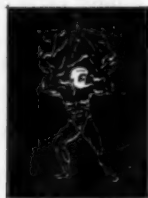

"Unacceptable Conditions"

The Committee said it "desires this review and close supervision because if constant vigilance is not maintained, the following unacceptable conditions could result:

"(1) Individuals and units stationed overseas could become so engrossed in their own daily 'housekeeping' that they do serious damage to their military mission."

"(2) Unacceptable immobility due to the ratio of noncombatants to combat troops. Large and vulnerable numbers of dependents stationed in potential theaters of combat might well introduce personal considerations into the minds of those who should be solely preoccupied with military operations."

"(3) The cost of maintaining and providing logistical support for overseas installations could exceed their military value."

Feats of Hercules No. 5

FROM THE SNOWS OF FUJIYAMA TO THE SANDS OF FLORIDA

The Lockheed C-130 HERCULES, now in service with the United States Air Force at Ashiya Air Base, Japan, won its "go anywhere, haul anything" reputation the hard way.

In snow landing and take-off tests at Bemidji, Minnesota, the "Ski-130" HERCULES performed prodigious feats of strength and power. At 124,000 pounds gross take-off weight the ski-equipped HERCULES was airborne in 2,100 feet. Carrying the same payload it landed and stopped in only 1,200 feet.

At Eglin Air Force Base, Florida, the

C-130 HERCULES (weighing 110,000 pounds) landed on sand and stopped in 947 feet. Take-offs from sand, with the same load, averaged only 1,500 feet.

This famous aerial "strongman" can carry 90% of all types of missiles now operational with, and under development for, the U.S. Armed Forces. The C-130 HERCULES is now in world-wide service, or scheduled for delivery to: USAF's Tactical Air Command, U.S. Air Forces-Europe, Pacific Air Force, Air Photo and Charting Service, other branches of the U.S. Armed Forces, and the Royal Australian Air Force.
